

Scarlet's Letter

March 16, 2009

Meet Be Be. One of the cutest and most beautiful pleasure items to come out of Australia. Lisa Hughes and Kristine Morgan, creators and owners of the new company Love Being Woman, because in the slogan "Happy not inhibited, Frisky not frustrated" "Be Be comes packaged in a pretty black satin bag that is closed with a ribbon. Upon opening the bag, I reached in and gasped at the gorgeous package that the Be Be was resting in. A quality purple case, almost resembling an adult "Easter egg", adorned with a pretty feminine swirled design and the Love Being Woman logo. Opening the case, I found the Be Be nestled inside, sitting on a velvety black surface of the inner case. I picked the Be Be up and examined its contoured body. It's sensual, it's sexy, it's curved to hit all of the right places on a woman's body. The pretty deep plum color is very pretty, and the body of the vibrator is made of durable high quality plastic that is silky smooth to the touch.

I was worried that the vibrations might not be intense enough for me, but honestly, they were awesome! The intensity was lovely and just as nice as some of the rechargeable vibes that I've used. I love this vibrator. It's cute, I love the shape, it makes clitoral stimulation perfect, and it's great for both inner and outer labia stimulation also. Easy to use, feels great in your hand, and is very easy to maneuver. This toy is super discreet also. In fact, it's sitting on my desk right now.

I really like the fact that a woman-owned sex toy brand in Australia has come up with a toy that all women can enjoy. I have always said that AU was a great place for fashion and lingerie, and I hope to see it gain popularity with this fashionable and cute clitoral vibe.

(excerpt from review by Scarlett's Letter, a blog showcasing adult items for women)